Reagan Says Never Again to Iran Tactic

By Gerald M. Boyd New York Times Service

Section 19 WASHINGTON - President Ronald Reagan has repudiated his Iran policy initiative, saying "I would not go down that road Sale A again" if given the opportunity.

in a nationally broadcast news sanference, Mr. Reagan also emphatically stated that he had no knowledge that profits from the arms sales to Iran were diverted to the Nicaraguan insurgents, called COBLIAS.

The news conference was dominated by questions on the Irancontra affair with Mr. Reagan, from the start, striking a forthright posture in defense of his policy.

relationship with a country that is very important strategically and also behind the scenes to try and get an end to that war, an end with no victory, no vanquished, both countries retiring to their own boundaries, and so forth,"

"So I wasn't going to miss that opportunity, and I approved our going ahead."

Asked if the Iran-contra controversy had complicated the government's efforts to gain the release of American hostages in Lebanon, the president replied, "It's rather hard to tell right now." He said, "We're going to contin-

"I'd be surprised if he was," he said, "and I'd be grateful if he did." Speaking of the Israeli arms sale to Iran, Mr. Reagan said that at about the time the Reverend Benjamin Weir was released in Beirut in September 1985, he knew that the arms-for-hostages policy "must have come up" at White House meetings, and that "I must have verbally given the okay." But he said he could not remember it.

The president was asked if he knew directly or indirectly whether funds were diverted to the contras. and if he had been deceived by Rear Admiral John M. Poindexter, his former national security adviser, or Lieutenant Colonel Oliver L. North, a former aide on the National Security Council staff.

Mr. Reagan replied, "I did not know there was any money in-volved." He added that Attorney General Edwin Meese 3d had told him of the diversion after a short investigation.

U.S. Senate Asks Action Against Japan on Trade

By Stuart Auerbach

ngian Pasi Service WASHINGTON -- The Senate has demonstrated the depth of anti-Japanese sentiment on Capitol Hill by calling on President Ronald Reagan to retaliate against Japan for failing to abide by two major trade agreements. The nonbinding resolution passed Thursday night, by a vote of 93-0, was the strongest expression of congressional displeasure with Japan since the Senate voted, 98-0, widely seen in Congress as that country's continued refusal to fair on trade.

The House, engaged in passing a broad-based trade bill, is likely to take similar action this month.

The U.S. trade representative, Clayton K. Yeutter, has disagreed with some parts of the House trade bill, but he has praised the overall congressional mood on trade legislation for being bipartisan and constructive.

In Thursday night's debate, however, senators said quick action was needed on the resolution. They said it would belp stiffen administration resolve to act against Japan on two trade disputes that face early dead-

Red Brigades Faction Takes Responsibility

By Roberto Suro New York Times Service

ROME - Italy's director of air and space weapons, an air force general, was shot and killed in his car Friday by two assailants on a motorcycle in what authorities termed a terrorist attack.

General Licio Giorgieri, 62, died almost immediately after being hit by several shots in the attack, which was claimed by an offshoot of the Red Brigades terrorist group. The acting defense minister. Giovanni Spadolini, on his way to the scene of the murder, said: "The Red Brigades continue to operate." General Giorgieri was in the back seat of his official car only a few blocks from his home in Rome's western suburbs at the time of the assault. His driver was not Less than an hour after the assault a woman telephoned the Milan office of the La Repubblica newspaper and claimed that a group called the Red Brigades-Union of Fighting Communists had "executed" the general.

Police said the assailants fired several shots through the rear window of the general's car, then pulled alongside and fired again through the side window.

The assassination came as Italy's 17-day political crisis continued with the prime minister-designate. Giulio Andreotti, making another effort to form a government.

Yugoslavia Announces Price Freeze

BELGRADE — The Yugoslav government announced Friday a freeze on prices, apparently reacting to a wave of labor strikes called to protest a government-imposed wage freeze.

In a statement issued through the official Tanjug press agency, the government said the price freeze would affect food, consumer goods, tools, textiles and furniture. The freeze, which restores prices to their Dec. 31 levels, is to take effect within five days and last for

The move follows labor unrest triggered by a government wage law that returned personal incomes to the average level of the last quar-ter of 1986. The law also orders that all future incomes be pegged to increased productivity.

The statement on Friday said: "The disturbance in price movements has reached such proportions that it directly threatens the achievement of set economic policy and development, with strong socio-economic and political conse-

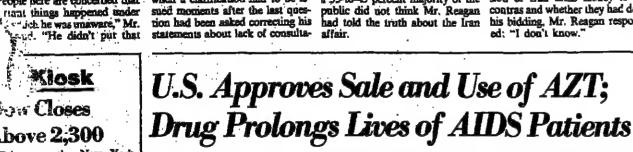

Prices of about 19,000 products had been raised 100 to 800 percent by about 1,000 producers, the statement said.

It said the price freeze would affect products that had gone up by more than 20.3 percent in the first two months of 1987.

The statement said price rises in the first two months of 1986 had a negative effect on production and exports and had increased inflation, which last month was 91,6 percent.

The statement said companies that did not raise prices above the percentage rise of industrial products last year could ask the Federal Institute for Prices for exemption from the new measures.

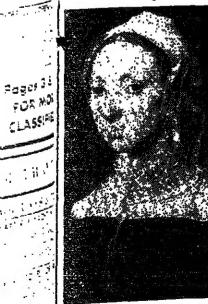

Strikes have been called throughout the country to protest the wage freeze law approved in February by Prime Minister Branko Mikulic, women and four Frenchmen charged with spying on Western Europe's space program are believed to have been seeking information on a new European rocket motor designed to launch the Hermes space shuttle, space agency sources said Friday.

The sources said the six, charged Wednesday in Rouen, north of Paris, were suspected of passing infor-mation on the HM-60 motor for the future Ariane-5 rocket. The Ariane-5 has been designed specifi-cally for the Hermes. The Hermes, operated by the 11-nation European Space Agency, is scheduled to go into space in 1995.

They were charged with passing information to an unnamed foreign power. The chairman of the French-controlled Arianespace rocket consortium that markets cargo space on the program, Frèdéric d'Allest, implicated the Communist bloc in a radio interview.

He said Friday that the Soviet Union, India and Brazil could be interested in acquiring information on European space technology.

"I do not want to give any false trail," Mr. d'Allest said of the spy ring, but "it seems as if it leads to the East bloc." The Ariane program has concen-

The HM-60 is being developed by the Société Européenne de Proulsion at the state-owned company's plant in the town of Vernon, 50 miles (80 kilometers) northwest of Paris. The plant employs 1,600 people and, as a defense industry concern, is subject to extremely

In what The Washington Post calls the "Los Angelization" of America, satellite cities are springing up around every major U.S. city. As many as 14 such cities are emerging in the Washington area.

These satellite cities, also called by such names as "urban villages" and "megacenters," have more jobs than bedrooms and they have replaced the suburban residential way of life with the convenience and congestion

This shift from pre-World War II cities to 21st-century cities," says Christopher B. Some see this urbanization as the logical reversal of suburban sprawl "This is not really the aberration," said Jane Jacobs author of "The Death and Life of Great American Cities. "The aberration is how thin things got. I think we decentralized artificial-

Israel Reportedly Recruited Pollard After Spying by CIA

WASHINGTON - A U.S. senator has asserted that Israel recruited Jonathan Jay Pollard to spy on the United States after learning that the CIA had conducted an espionage operation against Israel in 1982, a source said Friday.

Senator David F. Durenberger, ormer chairman of the Senate intelligence committee, told a group of American Jewish fund-raisers and lobbyists that the former director of central intelligence, William I. Casey, authorized the operation during Israel's invasion of Lebanon, according to the source, who is close to the U.S. Congress.

An Unyielding Defense On 2 Essential Points

Reagan Firm on Hostages, Contras And Contradicts Tower Findings

By Lou Cannon

Washington Past Service
WASHINGTON — Facing a severe test of his ability to present a coherent defense of his Iran-contra policy, President Ronald Reagan firmly stood his ground at his new conference before a barrage of questions that challenged his credibility and competence.

One essential, which Mr. Reagan repeated Thursday night in varying forms, was that he did not intend his fran initiative to turn into the trade of arms for hostages that he acknowledged it became. The other essential, as Mr. Reagan told it, was that he knew nothing about diversion of proceeds from the fran arms sales to the Nicaraguan contras until Attorney General Edwin Meese 3d informed him of it the day before it was disclosed publicly in November. In holding to this account, Mr.

Resean contradicted some of the findings of the Tower board he appointed. But he said he accepted what the board said. The panel was chaired by a former senator, John G. Tower, Republican of Texas.

The president also raised new mestions about his recollection of the events that led to the arms sales to Iran in the first place.

Early in his news conference, Mr. Reagan was asked about the statement of his former national security adviser, Robert C. McFarlane, who told the Tower board that in early August 1985, after several meetings of National Secu-rity Council officials, the president had given Mr. McFarlane authorization in a telephone call to allow U.S. arms to be shipped from Israel

Mr. McFarlane said he also reminded the president that both Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger opposed this sale. "Do you have no memory of that whatsoever?" a reporter asked Mr. Reagan. In a long response to this and a series of follow-up questions, Mr. Reagan repeated previous asser-tions that he remembered authorizing the arms sale but did not know when he had done it. But Thursday night he appeared to incorrectly remember what Mr. McFarlane had said. The president disputed the idea that he had re-

CIA Maintains It Played Down Chance of Improving Iran Ties "trend" of intelligence reports in the summer and the fall was going against the May assessment

By Michael R. Gordon

WASHINGTON - Senior Central Intelligence Agency officials say they repeatedly gave the White House intelligence reports in the fall of 1985 that indicated there was little prospect for improving U.S. relations with Iran, even as the Reagan administration began a covert initiative to accomplish that purpose.
The CIA officials said they also repeatedly advised the White House at this time that there was no imminent threat that the Soviet Union would gain significant influence in Iran.

Nonetheless, the White House les to Iran and even composed an intelligence finding in January 1986 that cited growing Soviet influence in the Gulf region as a maor rationale for the Iran arms sale

The CIA officials agreed to be interviewed on Wednesday to counter allegations that government intelligence reports had exag-gerated accounts of instability in Iran and the purported Soviet threat to lend support to President Reagan's Iran initiative.

But they acknowledged that the autumn 1985 intelligence assessments on Iran represented a reversal of an estimate the previous spring saying that the political situ-ation in Tehran was deteriorating and that the Soviet threat was seri-

One knowledgeable official said administration became preoccapied with exchanging arms for American hostages and the intelligence assessment about han and the Soviet Union became less reje vant to the White House.

He said he did not know if White House officials conveyed to Mr. Reagan the new reports, which were formally codified in an intellience estimate in 1986. Despite the ministration continued covert neectiations with Iran over hostages

BAGUIO, Philippines — A So-viet-made anti-lank explosive used in the bombing of the Philippine Military Academy on Wednesday was part of a shipment seized by the military in 1972, a ranking officer said Friday. The disclosure, by Brigadier General Jesus de la Cruz, cast doubt on claims that Communist rebels were to blame for the bomb-

General de la Cruz said a B-40 anti-tank bomb used in the explosion came originally from arms shipped to Communist robels by China but intercepted and confiscated by the military.

Four persons were killed and more than 40 were injured in the explosion. The Communist New People's Army had been suspected of setting the time bomb, but it said it was not responsible. Western military analysts said they doubted the rebels would have carried out

Turning Warily to Syria

The dispatch of Syrian troops directly position to press the pro-Iranian groups in the city's southern suburbs to start releasing the 20 or so hostages they hold. Presumably this includes the three Americans and, possibly, also Terry Waite. One hostage, a Saudi diplomat, is now free. He was presented at a news conference held by Syria's Lebanese clients, the Shiite Moslem militia Amal, and by Syrian representatives. Saudi Arabia, it can be argued, is always a special case in the Arab world. Still, the release of the diplomat has generated a quiet wave of new hope that, with further Syrian help, other hostages also may be freed.

Precisely here a central irony of counterterrorism comes to roost. Syria is one of the bad guys. It was among the first countries placed on the U.S. government's terrorism list in 1979. Last year its operatives were convicted of major offenses in the courts of two democratic countries. The rights group Amnesty International has charged Syrian troops with murdering hundreds of civilians in the Lebanese city of Tripoli in December and executing 23 pro-Iranian Shiite fundamentalists in Beirut in February.

lows Syria to plan heinous acts also allows it to carry off humane ones for tactical reams, when it pleases. The United States finds itself simultaneously seeking to isolate Syria and inviting it to earn its passage back to international favor.

As far as Iran goes, Washington is dead in the water. The option the U.S. government once thought it had of negotiating the release of hostages with some faction in Tehran has played out, and nothing has replaced it. What prospects for release there now are depend on U.S. relations with Syria, Damascus, playing its own Middle East game, hints at a certain readiness to restrain the Lebanese clients of its ally Iran; these clients in Hezbollah and other groups hold the hostages - mostly, it seems, in Beirut's southern suburbs. But Washington cannot easily resume dealing with the Syrians on the hostages or on broader political questions. The dangerous task of seeking limited cooperation with Syria will probably be left to the next administration. Meanwhile, Americans must hope Syria sees its own interest in helping free all the hostages.

Democracy's Antibodies

The American political system has been sorely tested in recent months. Charges of high-level influence peddling and suspicions of lawbreaking in the White House have strained confidence in the administration and in democracy itself. Now, for a nation so injured by greed and abuse of power, there is fresh evidence of democratic vitality.

Untypically, some of the powerful are putting their differences aside for a swift and just resolution of the scandals. The courts have rebuffed challenges to the constitutionality of the independent prosecutor. Surprisingly, House and Senate leaders have agreed to cooperate with each other and with the independent counsel.

The perjury indictment of Michael Deaver, the former White House deputy chief of staff, is only the latest proof that the powerful are accountable under the law. Two highly placed military officers, Rear Admiral John Poindexter and Lieutenant Colonel Oliver North, are under investigation for apparently circumventing the laws in the Iran-contra affair.

The investigations are in the hands of select congressional committees and an independent counsel, all talented and proper but potentially in debilitating competition. Now the committees have decided to hold extraordinary joint hearings to get more quickly to the bottom of events. They have found broad agreement with the independent counsel, Lawrence Walsh, about when and how to compel the testimony of Admiral Poindexter. Colonel North and other uncooperative witnesses. This should reduce the risks that getting to the truth would undermine possible later prosecutions.

Perhaps the healthiest sign of all is that the independent counsel provisions of the Ethics in Government Act have survived initial legal attacks by Mr. Deaver and Colonel North. Granted, it took three weeks for the courts to do the five-minute job of determining that their pre-indictment suits were premature. Two courts delivered opinions favorable to the law's constitutionality that went beyond the strict needs of the cases. It is as if the Deaver and North challenges stirred the antibodies of the legal system to defend democracy's health, which depends so heavily on the accountability of its leaders.

With the legal and much of the political system responding, it remains for the reluctant witnesses to do their part. Admiral Poindexter, Colonel North, retired Major General Richard Secord and others have invoked their undisputed constitutional privilege against self-incrimination. Congress, in cooperation with Mr. Walsh, is preparing to exercise its undoubted right to force them to testify even if Mr. Walsh, using independent evidence, later prosecutes them. The admiral, the colonel and the general then will have a clear duty to testify fully and honestly for the good of the democracy they pledged to serve.

In the world of cosmetics, the currency is used more rigorous data than Upjohn's, dreams, and fantasy defeats hard truth. suggests about 15 percent. Now comes Minoxidil, a hair restorer that tive. Is this another wishful illusion or does the chemical really resurrect hair? The answer seems just a smidgeon of both.

Men believe, often quite erroneously, that they lose their attractiveness along with their hair. Many will pay and do almost anything to make bare scalps bloom again. That is why for months Upjohn's stock has been floating in the stratosphere on the notion that its blood pressure drug, Minoxidil, has a hair-raising side effect. This week a group of scientists advising the FDA declared that Minoxidil was indeed effective at making hair grow.

But the bald should hold onto their hats a white longer. The scientists do not mean 100 percent effective, only that rubbing a lotion of Minoxidil into the scalp twice a day makes a statistically significant difference, compared with rubbing in a lotion of nothing. Even Upjohn claims only 40 percent of people will benefit. Robert Stern, the chairman of the advisory group, which

As for the lucky 15 percent, they will be committed to spending $600 a year for life, which could be a lot more painful than mere baldness. If the drug is stopped, new hairs fall out.

Why would the FDA give its blessing to so dubious a gift? Americans are already rubbing Minoxidil into bald pates, though it is approved for other purposes. And there are worse things than Minoxidil. "If you are worried about the consumer, this type has been rubbing placenta on his scalp and all other kinds of strange things," says Neal Penneys, another FDA adviser.

But if the agency's defense of the consumer is to be more than skin deep, it will insist the low chances of success be clearly stated on the drug's packaging, and encourage Up-john to define better who is likely to benefit and by how much. Otherwise millions of bald Americans will be scalped again,

Cooking the Soviet Books

Several U.S. and European experts on the Soviet economy see evidence that change-resistant bureaucrats are deliberately cooking the books in order to paint a rosier economic picture than the facts warrant. Soviet statistical organizations are not above toying with the figures for political reasons. But on the whole, Western experts have found Soviet economic statistics to be basically accurate over the years.

Recently, however, Soviet-watchers such as Ed Hewitt of the Brookings Institution, Philip Hanson of the University of Birmingham in England and Jan Vanous of Washington-based Planecon Inc. say that they have spotted some outright deceptions. Growth in national retail trade was officially reported to be 4.3 percent in 1985 and 6.4 percent last year, for example, while several Western experts who cross-checked the estimates with other data have concluded that the real figures were more like 1.6 percent in 1985 and 0.5 percent in 1986. Real growth in national income actually was only 0.8 percent in each of the last two years, rather than the 3 percent-plus figure reported by the Central Statistical Administration.

Western analysts do not believe that the distortions are part of a disinformation program aimed at the West. One explanation might be that the phony figures are inspired by Mr. Gorbachev and the Politburo to make their stewardship of the Soviet economy look good. But Mr. Vanous and Mr.

Hewitt, among others, doubt it.
They believe that Mr. Gorbachev is actually the victim of the phony figures, that officials in the planning bureaucracy who oppose his reforms are conspiring with senior party officials who also oppose the loosening of controls. As Mr. Hewitt said, Faking progress is another way of saying,

We're doing O.K., so let's not change. If this is correct, the fudging with statistics underscores the depth of the entrenched opposition to even the relatively modest reforms proposed by Mr. Gorbachev. -- The Los Angeles Times

W ASHINGTON — On the same recent day a Soviet official acknowledged what the world has long known — that the Soviet Union has chemical weapons - and a Soviet agency acknowledged what no one ever doubted - that there is inflation in the Soviet economy - there was a third and comparably dramatic development on the glasnost front. It was reported that glasnost has a glittering pedigree: Lenin loved it.

It seems Lenin used the word "glasnost," meaning openness, 46 times. That is not a promiscuous use when spread through 55 vol-umes of his writings, and some uses are of almost delphic inscrutability: "Glasnost is a sword which itself can heal the very wounds it may inflict" and (he loved martial metaphors) it is good to use "the artillery fire of party glas-nost to combat vice and error." Of course the party alone defines vice and error.

Near the Kremlin a poster reads, "Even today Lenin is more alive than all the living." His texts are scrutinized the way theologians scrutinize scripture. Ten linguists toiling full-time have compiled 2.5 million cards establishing that Lenin used 37,600 different words; he invented 4,000, few of which are still used. One still in use is chekist. It means "secret policeman."

During Khrushchev's fall in the early 1960s, liberalization rose from below, and the line between permissible and impermissible behavior became binned. Mr. Gorbachev's thaw is imposed from above, reasserting the regime's unbridled capriciousness. For example, "Dr. Zhivago" will finally be published, but the regime squeiched rumors that it would permit publication of Solzhenisyn's "Cancer Ward."

It is now obligatory in polite society to say that if Mr. Gorbachev means what he says about reforms, we should hope he succeeds. But is anyone listening to what he says? His reiteration ed aim is to make the Leninist system ("more of the same") more efficient. Why is that in the best interests of the West?

Mr. Gorbachev has been Soviet leader for more than two years. Thus it is indicative of his values that the Soviet press is still full of Goebbels-like lies. Apparently those winking liberals are going to be in fashion again, with all their paraphernalia of emphemisms, hints, vague allusions, and ideological duplicity. An example: Under glasnost, as usual, the mention of Judaism in a positive mode is considered inappropriate."

When a new generation takes over an old neighborhood and tidies up Victorian houses while preserving their basic structures, it is called "gentrification." Glasmost can thus properly be called the gentrification of totalitarianism.

Europeans Shouldn't Sniff At Wall Street's Scandals

By Flora Lewis

PARIS — Among themselves, Enropean businessmen and finan-ciers are quaking at the implications of the Wall Street financial scandals. They worry about a sudden loss of investor confidence if the scandals turn out to be more widespread than it appears. The stock markets are still high, but prices are considered to represent a speculative bubble due in large part to what is now called the "oil bonus," not to real growth.

Industrial countries have "saved" $70 billion to $100 billion as a result of lowered oil prices. Economists ask where that money, which would have been paid to oil producers, has gone. The answer seems to be primarily into the stock markets, bidding up quotations rather than expanding production and creating jobs.

As a result of three important changes in recent years, a new global financial market is developing, linking national markets. Computer communications providing instant informstion around the world, removal of regulations on capital transfers in major Enropean countries, and what the experts call "financial engineering," new techniques for raising funds, have combined to create an unprecedented flow of money across borders without relation to actual trade.

This spreads the risks and can be considered a new strength in the world system, one economist said, but he pointed out that it also means a much rigger blowout if the bubble bursts.

There is almost no U.S.-type regulation in Euro-pean markets, and the dealers dread the idea that it may be forced on them. A Dutch businessman with top-level international connections said sarcastically that there were three basic reactions to the scandals among the European establishments. One has been to sniff at shoddy U.S. instruments such as greenman and junk boods and say: "It can't happen here. We don't do such things. That's why it's Americans who are being caught. We always knew Americans didn't keep up to our high moral standards." But he said that what this really meant was that the Europeans keep their operations secret and no one makes a careful check on them: "We have political scandals but we hardly ever have corruption scandals because we aren't that open. Our dirty linen never gets washed." He wouldn't let his name be published. Even to the whistle-blowers, the habits of "discretion" are too deeply set, Another reaction here is to shrug dents, not part of a pattern. That is an ostrich response.

And a third reaction is radical, though it comes from conservative industrialists who worry that the money markets on which they must rely are off the Wall Street hijinks as inci-deteriorating into jungle capitalism.

They talk about nationalizing banks.
The scandals, it is pointed out, have all involved financial manipulators, takeover artists who move paper around, not the managers of produc-tive companies. Further, they have not involved the big banks, which are accustomed to keeping detailed re-cords and making full reports.

Some people here feel the commercial banks should be allowed to move in on the relatively smaller investment houses and impose their stricter rules. But that would only add to gigantism and the possibility of a few firms dominating the markers.

So the idea is also spreading that Wall Street's scandals offer healthy proof that the U.S. system of financial regulation does catch chesters. It. can use improvement, but it is al-

The traditional European system has been to rely on peer pressure, the supposition that established houses will keep each other houses because it is not gentlemanly not to be Of — course, that leaves it up to the gentle-men who run the market to decide what is and what is not honest.

They do not like the thought of investigators prying into their records; and they werry that the ups with U.S. firms will subject them too to unaccustomed scrutiny. But the choice now is to open up national markets to outsiders or resign themselves to the backwaters of the global economy.

So it is time for the major countries to think about working up some inter-national market rules. This would be a useful subject for the next seven-nation economic summit conference.

the rich private buyers from all over that make life more difficult for professionals at Sotheby's and Christie's post sales, particularly in New York. And as a result of its peculiar cataloguing style, those millionaire amateurs that might have come against all odds would barely have been led to surmise the presence of a major piece tucked away in a mass of pictures of the kind sought by old fashioned interior decorators.

On Tuesday as Jacques Tajan, of the Adex-Picard-Tajan team, ascended the podium, few among those attending expected anything out of the ordinary. No less than pree experts sat at a table near the odium, essentially because Drouot "experts" effectively operate as agents for the auctioneer giving expert advice mainly on those pictures that have reached the auctioneer through them.

In the catalogue, many pictures were taken care of in just one line. The entry for what is easily one of the most astonishing Old Master paintings seen at auction this season is a classic. Under the name Heemskerck, to whom the portrait

Three years in Rome around 1532-35 had a dramatic impact on his style. He discovered Michelangelo and Raphael -, the latter he admired even more. He was made aware of the scope of portrait painting and fell under the spell of Italian Mannerism. The Drouot portrait is one of the most extraordinary creations in the style devised by Heemskerck. There is a medieval stiffness about the upright bust, stylized like some character out of Van Eyck. But the intense eyes, burning with repressed anxi-ety, and the lips tightly pressed bear the mark of the new age, with its concern for individuality. The fingers of the left hand tensely poised over the rosary beads have an expressiveness that belongs to modern times.

Most typical of Mannerism in its northern version is the atmosphere of threatening ambiguity created by a few discreet touches - the eerie (eminine face with a purposeful expression that terminates the arm of the chair, the grim ironical satyr's mask clenching its teeth over the strings holding an armorial shield that probably bears the arms of the sitter. Henry James would have loved it.

The expert, who may not dote on "The Turn of the Screw," apparently responded tepidly to the work. He and his colleagues gazed with embarrassed grins as Tajan. a tempest at sea observed from the came aware of the fame of Jan van equally at sea, obviously wondered Schoorel, he shifted allegiance. But when a telephone bidder would give up against the steady bidding from the back of the room. The presence of London dealers and agents - drowned in a crowd of French upper class onlookers who had been attracted by some 18thcentury pictures from the collection of Prince Murat - might have given him a clue. It is not every day that so many familiar faces from Duke Street and New Bond Street can be seen all at once at Drouot.

> The final price, 4,403,655 francs, was more than eight times the high estimate. It should be noted not so much as a "record" price - a meaningless phrase concerning Heemskerek, hardly seen at auction in recent years - but as an indicator of what important pictures by rarified 16th-century masters may now be worth at auction. In the light of what happened in the autumn sales of New York and London, it is not particularly high. It may indeed be raised several notches in a future transaction. Only in a Drouot sale could such a picture be so blantantly underestimated - unless the whole of the British art trade got it wrong, an unlikely contingency.

But much the same treatment is meted out to paintings from closer to home. While no other picture remotely compared in aesthetic significance with the Heemskerck portrait, there were two or three French School paintings well worth museum attention. Not one landscape by Adrien Manglard, the master of the better known Joseph Vernet, has been sighted on the auction market in a decade or so. On Tuesday there was one - "Sauvetage d'un navire," a large view of

Marking 40 Years of the House of Dior

PARIS — This is Dior's week, with both President François Mitterrand and Prime Minister Jacques Chirac helping this national monument of a fashion house to mark its 40th anniversary with three days of celebrations.

Mitterrand Thursday inaugurated an exhibition at the Musée des Arts de la Mode devoted to the late Christian Dior's designs from 1947 to 1957. That afternoon, Dior licensees from around the world were received at the Paris city hall.

On Friday evening, 500 people were invited to a black-tie dinner to inaugurate Dior's new 1,600square-meter boutique. For this occasion, a tent was buil: around the Dior fashion house on Avenue Montaigne, recreating the neighborhood as it was 40 years ago - with cases and boutiques, and a flower shop that has since disappeared. Saturday night there will be a party at Maxim's hosted by Bernard Arnault, the industrialist from the construction business who owns the house today. Guests will include Eileen Mehle (the columnist Suzy), Jerome Zipkin and the socialite Ann

In 1947, the house of Dior had a $300,000 turnover and 80 employees. In 1986, it employed 750 people and its turnover, including licenses but without per-fumes, came to 600 million francs (about $100 million).

This success is largely due to the talent of Marc Bohan, its designer since 1960, and to the business acumen of Jacques Rouet, its director for 38 years, who left a couple of years ago.

The exhibition offers a close look at a designer who changed the course of fashion in a relatively short time. A shy, retiring man from Normandy, Dior, who became famous overnight, had strong ideas about his craft, most of which ring true today. Among them: Women don't wear what they like. They like what they wear"; "Fashion makes an elegant woman more beautiful and a beautiful woman more elegant" and "An elegant woman does not ride a bicycle." — HD

Dow Soars to Close Above 2,300

11445 NA 11744 SAN NA 11745

NEW YORK — Prices on the New York Stock Exchange reached their fourth consecu-tive record high on Friday, as investors defied worries about the "triple-witching hour" and 2,300 for the first time.

The Dow average, which rose 12.64 to a record high Thursday, soared 33.95 to close at 2,333.52 in heavy trading among the 1,981 issues traded. Broad market indexes also hit new records. The New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 2.09 to 169.37. Standard & Poor's 500stock index was up 4.09 to 298.17. The price of an average share gained 54 cents. Volume amounted to about 234 million shares, compared with about 166 million on Thursday. Investors seemed to shrug off worries about the triple-witching hour, the quarterly event in which stock index futures come due and options on the futures and on individual stocks simulta-

For the past several quarters, the event has caused wild price swings amid surging volume in the last half-hour of trading. Institutional investors came into the market early, analysts said, with foreign institutions, particularly the Japanese, buying heavily.

The buying tapered off in midafternoon as investors retired to the sidelines to await the hectic final half-hour

The buying kept the Dow above the 2,300 level all day.

Institutions have been active again in the past couple of days," Tom Gallagher, an Op-penheimer & Co. managing director in charge of capital commitment, said. "They've been waiting for a correction that never showed up, and now they're looking to put money to work. Analysts said the market opened strong on the belief that futures-related trading programs linked to the triple-witching hour were carried out earlier in the week. The betting as far as the witching hour is concerned was that the bulk of the options programs were already unwound, leaving only the upside potential," said Ralph Bloch, senior resident and chief market analyst at Raymond, James & Associates in St. Petersburg, Florida.

On the Big Board, Navistar was the most active NYSE-listed issue, rising ¼ to 7¼.

Pan Am followed, closing unchanged at 4% after announcing it had a $197.5 million fourthquarter loss.

LTV was third. It gained ¼ to 3 on news that a federal bankruptcy judge approved a $100 million financing arrangement between LTV and more than 20 banks as part of the company's reorganization under bankruptcy laws.

American Motors gained 1/2 to 41/2. The company said its board met but took no action on Chrysler's $4-a-share bid to acquire American

Technology and semiconductor issues closed mixed. IBM rose 14 to 1484, Hewlett-Packard gained 1 to 61% and Texas Instruments closed up 41/4 at 1761/2. But National Semiconductor lost % to close at 16 and Motorola dropped % to

THE GRAND SLAMMER

The word is that Mr. Inside Trader may be doing time at Eglin. Here's what it's really like inside the "Country By Gaeton Fonzi

o you're going to Florida, Mr. B? The word on the street is you may be going to the slammer, and if you're going you'll probably do Eglin. It's where the nattiest of the pinstripe set serve their time. Not only has it hosted the world's most fashionable felons, like Albert and Aldo, as well as other top-ranked corporate transgressors, it has served as the temsporary residence for a variety of onetime headliners of class acts from Watergate to Abscam. You may have been at the top of the arbs, Mr. B, but you'll be just another eight-digit number at Folks at the Federal Bureau of Prisons like to contend that Eglin itself is nothing special, just one of 21 minimum-security prisons among the 47 penal facilities in the federal system. Sure, other minimum-security camps closer to Wall Street-like Allenwood in Pennsyl-'r vania and Danbury in Connecticut—get their share of headliners, too. But down through the years Eglin has copped a reputation for being the jug of choice for the convicted rich and famous. And, although the Prison Bureau claims there's no "choice" involved, Eglin annually seems to walk away with the Celebrity Jail of the Year award. The fact that Eglin is in the Florida panhandle may be a factor. For many of the privileged malefactors who opt for Eglin, Florida has always meant sunny skies, soft sandy beaches, and plenty of fast action. That's not the Florida at Eglin, of course, but it's a tough image to shake.

Another thing you should know up front, Mr. B: although Eglin is in the South, it won't remind you of the Monticello replica you were planning to erect on your Westchester estate. Although there's a certain wonderment to Eglin's maze of cubicles, grandiloquently designed into dormitory units, still, its barracks-style architecture doesn't quite soar. And although the prison is cut into a corner of the largest Air Force base in the nation, you may find its 27 acres a bit confining when you've been accustomed to ambling freely around a private 200-acre retreat. There aren't any security fences to give you that tight, closed-in feeling, but step over that white line in the road and you'll soon be sitting in a very tight cell in Leavenworth or Texarkana. And although you used to say, "I think greed is healthy," you'll have to abandon that philosophy. More than a buck in quarters in your pocket at any one time will land you in solitary. Now, first of all, Mr. B, do you know how to get to Eglin? Yes, of course you do, but we're not talking about geography. Rather than send the U.S. marshals to fetch you, the government prefers that you just show up at the gate on the assigned date. Saves the taxpayers money.

No problem with arriving by chauffeured limousine, Mr. B. although you might consider removing that gilded "IFB" license plate. They don't dig individualism at Eglin. You'll be Mr. 18926-849, or something just as distinctive.

The first sight of what the small directional sign calls the FEDERAL PRISON CAMP comes after you turn right at the second traffic light and then left by Range Road. That cluster of buildings down at the end of Inverness Road is the camp. Its B. Physically, you'll be in a place dominant structure is a neat, twostory white building trimmed in a warm brown with large, shady eaves and homey shutters on each window. It's surrounded by lush, manicured lawns, immaculately trimmed hedges (one of Albert's jobs was clipping them), immense oaks loaded down with Spanish moss, and large, spread-fanned cabbage palms.

It might be a small college campus. Yet there are no book-toting that resembles nobody's idea of a prison. James Cagney is not banging his cup on his cell bars. Dourfaced inmates aren't droning ominously in echoing, cavernous cellblock tiers. Clint Eastwood isn't secretly honing himself a bust-out blade amid the whirling cacophony of the machine shop.

God, that would be exciting, wouldn't it, Mr. B? But at Eglin there are no bars, no tiers, no angry mobs. And you don't need to students strolling about. Everywhere there are clusters of men in blue worsted pants and jackets busily raking and sweeping or clipping or mowing. It looks like a campus for groundkeepers.

And yet it exudes a certain serenity. It's an island of tranquillity in the corner of a bustling military post. The wind whispers through the tall pines, the soft sunlight sends hazy luminescent shafts through the canopies of the spreading magnolia trees. A hush prevails. Time seems to stand still.

And that'll be the bitch of it. Mr.

flash a blade to bust out-you can just quietly walk away. As a result, Eglin is a relentlessly tranquil place, severely neat, unmitigatingly sterile, and oppressively placid. It's pleasant enough to drive you nuts.

Eglin's appearance is deceptive. The campus-like atmosphere, the extensive facilities and amenities, even the gracious entrance to the administration building, with its green-carpeted homey front porch and pleasant foyer where you'll first check in, can throw you off. You'll sit there in that comfortable chair, the nondescript wall hangings and muted wallpaper reminding you of nothing more ominous than a dentist's waiting room. Soon a stocky, congenial-looking woman in a brown uniform will walk down the hallway from the records room, call your name, and lead you back through a door marked RECEIVING. Then the real Eglin will begin to come down on you.

First of all, Mr. B, you-a man who has cultivated and manipulated the power brokers of our nation, commanded deference from the world's top financiers, and had a cadre of Harvard M.B.A. flunkies jumping at your every command-yes, you will be given a printed form that sternly advises: While here, you are expected to conduct yourself as a gentleman, to be courteous to other inmates, to respect authority, to obey all institution regulations, and to follow instructions of staff members.

And you will. From the beginning you will be as docile as a lamb. You have no choice. That is what Eglin demands. You will be taken from the entrance fover back to the receiving office where you will be told to sit down, then to sit up straight while you are photographed. For the first time in your life you will feel that smiling is inappropriate.

Then all your clothes will be taken from you and sent home. You will be issued prison clothes-four blue shirts, four pairs of work pants, four T-shirts, four undershorts, three pairs of white socks, one belt, and one pair of work shoes.

After you are led through all the admissions paperwork and interviews, you will be taken to what will be your new home away from home, so to speak, your very own dormitory cubicle. Well, just yourand-one-other-guy's very own dormitory cubicle in your-and-morethan-180-other-guys' very own dor-

■ here are five dormitory buildings set in a cluster behind the administration building. The fifth unit was only recently completed, but Eglin's population has risen to the point where it is as overcrowded as the older units. The dormitories are air-conditioned, beige concrete buildings with a window strip for light under the eaves and a few white-louvered slit windows along each wall. Each of the dorms is divided into four wings, with a walk-through bathroom facility between each wing. There are eight shower stalls and toilets in each bathroom. You will share that bathroom with 90 of your fellow inmates. It won't remind you of the bath in your private suite at the Beverly Hills hotel. There is no bidet.

Each of the dormitory wings is blocked into a grid of cubicles formed by shoulder-high cinderblock walls. Standing, you can look across the entire dormitory and directly into adjoining cubicles. Not much privacy, but if there were banks of telephones and tables in the cubicles, Mr. B, it might remind you of a boiler-room sales operation for junk bonds.

You'll be assigned to one of the cubes, as they are called, with another inmate. Together you'll have a space measuring about seven feet by eight feet. Two iron-framed double bunks with thin mattresses are against one wall. The opposite wall is split into three partitioned units about 18 inches deep. One unit is a hanging locker with a shelf above it. The center unit is a "desk" section with a folding chair. The third unit is a stack of four shelves, two of them with locked doors. One is yours. That locked shelf represents the extent of your privacy at Eglin. And it is far from inviolate, because you can only use special lock that must be pur-

ness or political leaders who, through criminal conduct or simple recklessness, wake up one day to find themselves facing the very real danger of swapping their vertical pinstripes for fat horizontal

While white-collar-make that pinstripe-crime in America is nothing new, the nation's lust for prosecuting it is. Since the parade of Watergate trials in the 1970s. more than $100. Complicated criminal cases can often wind up costing the defendant almost half a million dollars. And, with some trials consuming more than three vears from first investigation through final appeal, the milliondollar defense is growing increasingly common.

Not surprisingly, the most well regarded defense attorneys tend to cluster where the mischief is. As often as not, that means New York and Washington. More and more, pinstripe clients in fear of becoming pinstripe defendants are forgoing the all-purpose attorney and availing themselves of this growing field of practitioners.

oris Kostelanetz is managsing partner of Kostelanetz & Ritholtz; he is now marking his fortieth year as one of New York's most successful attorneys for white-collar defendants.

"The cases we handle can involve almost anything," he says. "Tax evasion, fraud, antitrust, food and drug violations, forgeries, embezzlement, theft. When I first got started, back in the thirties, prosecutors didn't really want to handle white-collar cases; they were considered too dull. Why worry about some guy who performed a little hocus-pocus on the company books when there's a white slavery ring you can go after? Now, of course, all that has changed."

And changed dramatically. "The last few years have seen a big expansion of white-collar prosecution," says Stanley Arkin, head of the six-man firm of Stanley S. Arkin, P.C. "This is particularly true in the securities area, particularly true on the Eastern Seaboard, and particularly true in New York City."

Peter Fleming of Curtis, Mallet agrees: "Some years only thirty percent of my work is white-collar defense; some years it's as high as seventy percent. This could be one of those high periods; 1987 looks' like it's going to be the Year of the Inside Trader."

Stanley Arkin

Indeed, Fleming's client, Ira Sokolow, was small game compared to Dennis Levine; and Levine himself turned out to be just a costar in the year's most notorious insider-trading case: the prosecution of Ivan Boesky. Fined $50 million by the SEC, required to pay back an ill-gotten $50 million, and pleading guilty to a single charge, Boesky is represented by Washington, D.C., attorney Harvey Pitt, a partner in the multistate firm of Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson.

"The prosecutor's office in the Southern District of New York has an extremely aggressive program going," Pitt says. "And a lot of it seems to be geared to securities cases."

The people likely to feel the prosecutor's pinch are not the small-potatoes, dime-at-a-time salary men who occasionally dabble in whitecollar shenanigans, but the largescale lawbreakers. "I don't know whether there's been much of an increase in the overall prosecutorial appetite," says attorney Robert Morvillo of Obermaier, Morvillo & Abramowitz. "But there has been a rise in the high-visibility cases, and that's likely to continue."

Such magazine-cover trials are designed as much to nab the big fish as to scare and scatter the little ones. But even as they dash the reputations of their defendants, they often make the reputations of their lawvers. Without Boesky, Pitt would be almost unknown. Kostelanetz rose to prominence successfully defending T. Vincent Quinn, a Queens County district attorney indicted for conflict of interest in 1952. It was only later that he had the clout to attract such high-profile clients as Lyndon Johnson aide Bobby Baker, J. Truman Bidwell (former chairman of the New York Stock Exchange), and Dr. Kenneth Riland (a physician to Richard Nixon charged with income-tax fraud during the indictment frenzy of the Watergate years). Arkin's marquee cases have included the trial of Michael Nussbaum, former campaign manager for the late Queens borough president, Donald Manes, and a U.S. Supreme Court defense of Vincent Chiarella, the first widely publicized insider-trading defendant.

No matter how notorious many of their clients may be, pinstripe defenders tend to maintain a protective-almost fierce-loyalty to the clients they've guided through the courts. Kostelanetz speaks fondly of Quinn, as does Arkin of Nussbaum. Fleming openly gushes about John Mitchell, whom he defended against charges of perjury and obstruction of an SEC investigation.

THE NEW PINSTRIPE DEFENDERS When the going gets tough, the tough get these lawyers.

By Jeffrey Kluger

Then Ira Sokolow first walked into the law offices of Curtis, Mallet-Prevost, Colt & Mosle last June, he was 32, successful, comfortably wealthy-and in big trouble. Three weeks earlier, Sokolow and the rest of the New York financial community had been stunned when federal authorities announced the arrest of securities dealer Dennis Levine on charges of making a cool-and illegal-$12 million trading on inside leads and information. While many on Wall Street looked at the news as little more than watercooler gossip, Sokolow saw it as much more: he was one of the people who had slipped Levine his hottest tips. And the feds knew it.

Sokolow was shown to the modest office of Peter Fleming, a gangly partner at Curtis, Mallet, whose reputation was made by his 1974 criminal defense of former attorney general John Mitchell. At the meeting, Sokolow-understanding little about the criminal system except that it had caught his scent and wanted his hide-cast his lot with Fleming. The client told the lawyer his story: He and Levine were both employed at the Shearson Lehman Brothers investment house. Levine had been trafficking in illegal information for some time, and finally approached Sokolow asking for any details he might be willing to share regarding deals or projects he was currently working on. Levine would be happy to pay for the information. Sokolow spilled what he knew and Levine paid him for the information-$120,000 in all.

Now Sokolow was worried. Would he have to pay a fine? Would he have to go to jail? Could he continue to be a securities trader? He asked Fleming, head of the white-collar defense division at Curtis, Mallet, to represent him as he made his disclosures to the government, whatever the consequences might be.

This kind of case was hardly new to Fleming. For Sokolow, it was the beginning of a long and frightening legal ordeal. For his attorney, it was another day on the job.

Peter Fleming is one of a growing clutch of lawyers who make it their business to look after the world's Sokolows, Levines, Boeskys, and Poindexters-those busidistrict attorneys across the country-and their constituencieshave lost their willingness to wink at the felonies that are committed in the highest circles of industry and government. As the ranks of the defendants have swelled, so has the market for savvy lawyers able to pump up a jury's sympathy for a millionaire or a senator led into court with both hands tightly stuck in a cookie jar. A top defense attorney at a top law firm can now command fees as high as $300 an hour, even junior partners may bill chased at the commissary. Although it is a combination lock, it is also coded on the back so prison officials can open it whenever they

Like the lock, your cubicle also represents what Eglin really means. The cube is not a cell, and no doors clang shut when you walk in and out. Yet you'll have less privacy than in a cell, and there is not enough space for both you and your cubemate to move about at the same time. Recalls a recent former inmate, a major money launderer from Miami: "There wasn't a night at Eglin where I slept through the whole night. With forty to fifty men in just one part of the unit, and four times that many in the whole dorm, with everybody snoring or coughing or sneezing or yelling in their dreams, it was hell trying to get through every night."

Neither will your cubicle be your retreat. You will be held responsible for the condition of your living area, the rules warn. Failure to comply with these regulations will result in a disciplinary report So you will clean and mop the floor and make your bed before reporting to work call every morning. You will crease and envelope-fold the corners of your bunk coverings, military-style, tighten them smooth enough to bounce a dime, and leave an eight-inch collar at the turndown.

After you are indoctrinated with the rules and regulations, you will be assigned your job and your work schedule.

rankly, Mr. B, Eglin doesn't need another arbitrageur. In fact, it doesn't need any arbitrageurs, just as it doesn't need and can't use any doctors or lawyers or stockbrokers or investment bankers or exotic-goods importers. But it has plenty of each. As a result, since there are very few desk jobs as clerks or bookkeepers available, the vast majority of white-collar criminals at Eglin are doing blue-collar work. When new dorms and warehouse units were recently built, many new inmates found themselves pushing wheelbarrows or hammering rafters and doing other hard labor. Some appreciated the new lifestyle, according to Warden Mike Cooksev: "You'd be surprised how many lawyers and accountants who are pale and fat and on the edge of heart attacks when they get here later come up and thank me for saving their lives, for getting them in shape."

As much as you may look forward to adding definition to your deltoids, Mr. B, the inside word is that there are some hard-labor jobs you should hope to avoid. Working at the tire factory on the Air Force base, for instance, is daily blackface-dirty business. And in the summer the laundry is unbearable. Kitchen work is also hot and hard, but the early shift starts at 3:00 in the morning, which means you finish earlier in the day and can avoid the long evening lines at the telephones or get some quiet afternoon rest in an uncrowded

However, because of the large number of inmates at Eglin and the limited amount of productive work available, there are battalions of workers assigned to groundkeeping, building maintenance, and all sorts of general landscaping chores.

It is especially apparent within the prison itself. There are exclusive country clubs in Long Island that don't look as immaculately maintained. There are world-class golf courses whose greens aren't as meticulously edged as the walkways at Eglin. The glass gleams forever spotless on the dormitory doors, and the brass handles and kickplates, polished repeatedly each day, would put the brightwork on a fleet admiral's command ship to shame. Even older inmates, guys like Aldo, who arrived when he was 81, are assigned work details. See those omnipresent sand-filled ashtray cans attached to walls and posts all over the place? See that old man shuffling around with that little hand strainer dipping into the butt cans and removing the butts? Compared to the population on the outside, a larger ratio-about 50 percent-smoke at Eglin. But no cigarette butt remains in an asis tray or butt can for very long at Eglin, thanks to an army of sand strainers.

The routine changes a bit on Sat urdays, Sundays, and holidays. You will still be subject to stand-up counts throughout the day an night. But unless you're working the daily service jobs, such as cooking or kitchen details, you'll have the time to yourself. Visiting hours are from 8 a.m. until 33 p.m., but family and friends can simply drop in. When you arrive all Eglin, you will submit a list of the names of family members and rela tives you would like to see Each must be approved. (Your sis ter-in-law, for instance, may be considered a negative influence for calling you "the burn" in Time) Nonfamily members can visit only if you submit a special request form three weeks in advance of their planned visit.

And, by the way: visitors are also prohibited from chewing gum at Eglin.

Your contact with visitors will be restricted-hand shaking, kissing and embracing are permitted, but only upon arrival and departure. You may also want to tell Mrs. B that, during the visit itself, she'll be permitted to put one arm around your shoulder, upper back or waist. No touching any lower.

At the end of the visit and before leaving the visiting room, each inmate will step into a closetlike room next to the exit. There you may have to remove all your clothing and be searched.

Strip searching is an option that prison officials may exercise at any time. It is part of a constant surveillance and monitoring program.

At 10 p.m. you will return to your bunk for another head count. The lights will go out at 11 p.m.

At 12:30 a.m. guards will move through the dorms for another head count. Again at 2:30 And again at 4:30. Soon thereafter another day will dawn at Eglin. . .

PINSTRIPE DEFENDERS

and to prosecutors, pinstripe defense attorneys insist that it's essential to a successful defense. "A relationship between a criminal attorney and a defendant is not a purely commercial one," says Arkin. "You really have to like your client if you're going to work together closely."

Not that these attorneys spend their whole careers working cozily with the accused. In fact, most of them devote their first few years of practice not to representing lawbreakers, but to prosecuting

he majority—and I mean vast majority-of people in our field start off working for the U.S. attorney," says Morvillo, who spent seven years as a prosecutor in the Southern District of New York, arguably the nation's most prestigious federal district. "There is simply no better way to get trial experience."

Says Harvey Pitt, who spent ten years working for the Securities & Exchange Commission: "The first thing you have to be able to do for a client who's under attack is to know what's on the government's mind."

Knowing what's on the government's mind often helps defenders change the government's mind. When a grand jury or an investigative body begins looking in a potential defendant's direction, the smart defense attorney doesn't begin planning how to prevent a conviction, but how to prevent an indictment. "The biggest favor you can do for your client," says Arkin, "is to talk a prosecutor out of prosecuting. Sometimes you persuade him that your client is innocent; sometimes you concede that he did what the government says he did, but you argue that the offense is so small it just isn't worth pursuing. If you know what you're doing, a case can simply go away."

If practicing preventive law doesn't work and a client is formally accused, the defense attorney must rely on an entirely different collection of tactics. The first is the plea bargain. Though the client hopes to avoid any punishment at all and often resists this approach, the lawyer who knows how severe the penalties can become often encourages it. Says Pitt of his client Boesky: "He may well have to do some time in jail. But we only had to plead guilty to one count; that's better than five." -

When Kostelanetz represented presidential physician Kenneth Riland in his tax-evasion case, the lawyer's public relations approach was simple: he would paint the doctor not as a greedy millionaire trying to avoid paying his fair share to the government, but as a devoted-if befuddled-man of medicine who never quite figured how to file a tax return. "My defense was that this guy's a doctor, not an accountant," Kostelanetz says. "I had all his work papers and I argued that he just goofed them up." But he downplays the victory. "I got an innocent person off," says Kostelanetz.

As the number of prosecutions has increased, so has the severity of the punishment meted out by the courts. "The trend in these cases is toward more actual prison time," Morvillo says. "About half of all people now convicted will do some time at minimum-security facilities.

For many white-collar attorneys, however, the plea bargain is not always a popular choice. Arkin explains that the prosecutor who couldn't be cajoled out of pursuing a case in the first place is not likely to dicker once a grand jury hands down an indictment. Instead, one of the first steps some lawyers take in the face of a fresh indictment is to begin pleading the client's case not in the prosecutor's office or in court, but in the press.

"Handling a white-collar defendant-especially a high-profile white-collar defendant-can be a complicated thing," says Morvillo, who currently represents John Zaccaro (husband of Geraldine Ferraro), charged with bribery in a Queens cable-television deal.

There are a lot of conversations you can have with reporters that can put your client in a very favorable light," he says. "You have to be willing to answer questions. If you refuse, they take that as a sign that you've got something to hide and that's what makes it into the papers."

at there are ethical questions. How far out on a legal limb is the good lawyer willing to crawl? Should a white-collar attorney handle the guilty-as-sin client?

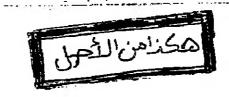

"Every lawyer confronts the problem of the client who walks into his office and says, I did it but I don't want to plead guilty," says, Morvillo. "There's nothing wrong with going along with his wishes, with going to court and putting the state to the test of proving its case beyond a reasonable doubt."

Sometimes a zealous pinstripe defender can get downright testy when protecting his client in public. Pitt, for one, needs little prodding to rise in angry defense of Boesky. "People are always asking, 'Why did he do it?' You can almost hear the self-righteousness in their voices. They all complain that he received too lenient a punishment. But I don't see a single one of them offering to pay any part of his 'lenient' hundred-million-dollar fine or serve any of the time he may have to serve."

Indignation notwithstanding, Morvillo, for one, concedes that the highly publicized cases like tout orbit and doesn't have the factor but and doesn't have but and doesn't have the factor force. Boesky's and Levine's have helped curb corporate crime. Now, Morvillo says, powerful people "don't just come to us after they've done something the prosecutor considers criminal.

"Now they call first," he says, "wondering if what they're about to do is criminal."

APRIL IN PARIS, IN JANUARY

How Ms. Faux Pas beheaded a fashion revolution. By Ms. Faux Pas

♥ zcusez-moi, while Ms. Faux Pas puts you on hold. Ms. Faux Pas is recently back from Paris and tout le monde is calling to find out what's hot there. Not the weather, to be sure. That's because in Paris, April takes place in January, when the spring (and summer) haute couture collections are unveiled.

And although you may think the pouf skirt is hot, the pouf is getting cold-and it's all Ms. Faux Pas's

You may wonder why Ms. Faux Pas, who buys her spring clothesaprès the season—in the summer when they go on sale, would have intimate knowledge of the strange rituals of French haute couture, in which the price of a dress-forsuccess suit is equivalent to the annual starting salary for Harvard Business School graduates.

But due to an incroyable case of mistaken identity, Ms. Faux Pas was initiated into the mysteries of high fashion by a world-famous editor.

Actually, Ms. Faux Pas was already headed for Paris the economical way. She was standing in line at JFK with her Born to Shop the January Sales tour groupwhich was unfortunately overbooked—when she was miraculously upgraded to the Concorde.

When the attendant at the checkin counter asked to see Ms. Faux Pas's ticket, Ms. Faux Pas said, "D'accord" (which is what glitterati say instead of okay), and suddenly she was ushered into the Concorde

There she was befriended by none other than Belle d'Orsay, the long-running French fashion forecaster, who mistook Ms. Faux Pas for an American fashion editor because she was dressed all in black. (Ms. Faux Pas always wears black when she travels because she once read a book on style by Lana Riviera, widow of the nailpolish king, advising that in case the plane is diverted to Beirut because of the weather, a little black dress goes anywhere.)

Trying to look nonchalant in the .Concorde lounge, Ms. Faux Pas was reading Il & Elle, the Harvard Lam-.poon fashion magazine. Madame d'Orsay asked Ms. Faux Pas if that was her magazine. Ms. Faux Pas replied: "D'accord," meaning it was her copy. Madame d'Orsay (who has had her share of misunderstandings-one of which resulted in her being barred for a time from couturier Yves Saint Honoré's fashion showings) misunderstood, assuming Ms. Faux Pas worked for R & Elle, and offered to take her to the spring shows. "D'accord," said Ms. Faux Pas, thinking it might be a good way to find some harkdowns.

... Pointing to the man across the aisle surrounded by white flower arrangements, Madame d'Orsay explained that the fashion world has its own orbit and doesn't revolve around the sun, but around its Sun King, the fashion forecaster Jean-Louis Fairweather. He is the publisher of WWWW-the Who, What, When, and Where (but never the Why) of fashion. In the trade, King Fairweather is referred ato as "Louie Sez" because, depending on what he says in wwww, a designer can take off like a meteor or become a falling spend September in New York in April, he decreed that April in Paris would be more convenient in January. Anyone who finds the fashion calendar confusing can read WWWW and learn how to make fashion predictions like a pro-that is, while being seasonally disoriented and jet-lagged.

The first requirement of a fashion forecaster, Madame d'Orsay confided, is to be able to attend a Paris runway show without getting claustrophobic. The exit crush at one of those events is so serious that fashion editors have been known to lock earrings and chain bags. Madame d'Orsay gave Ms. Faux Pas smelling salts and wire cutters for such emergencies, and loaned her a chain bag to tote it all in.

The second rule of fashion forecasting, said Madame d'Orsay, is: In order to get a good seat at the showings, always wear something by the couturier. Obviously, with five or more shows per day, it makes sense for Belle d'Orsay to travel around in a Citroën dressing room on wheels-and change in the van rather than return chez elle to do so.

Madame d'Orsay is one of the world's best customers for haute couture. Only in the daytime will she dress off-the-rack. In the evening, she says, haute couture is a must, or else she feels just a little-how do you say it?-

s. Faux Pas, who is definitely-how do you say it?-"thrifty," hoped her collection of designer scarves would assure front-row seats. But as Madame d'Orsay pointed out, scarves don't count as homage, since couturiers don't always design their own. (Ms. Faux Pas is going to demand a refund from the street peddler at 59th and Lexington.)

Anyway, once seated in the Grandiose Hotel bailroom, where the most prestigious couture shows are held, Belle d'Orsay (who got Ms. Faux Pas a front-row seat) explained that the main preoccupation is not the show. All the important journalists have previewed the clothes so they can write their columns ahead of time. This allows them to note what the competition is wearing and figure out how to exit without locking earrings. Those in front can vault up on the runway and get out fast by following it backstage. The only drawback to this escape route is that one must pass the couturier, who is standing back there taking note of which editors are not wearing his designs.

"Why not just sit in your seat till the ballroom empties out?" asked the naive Ms. Faux Pas of her tutor, Madame d'Orsay.

So you can dash to the Ritz before the others and see who's arriving with whom for lunch, said the expert.

But fashion forecasting is not all drudgery-working lunches, measuring the ebb and flow of hemlines, changing the water in the flowers one receives. In the evening, there's always a party. Were it not for Belle d'Orsay, Ms. Faux Pas would never have been invited to socialite Suzie Richfriend's annual surprise

The surprise is not for Suzie. It's for the guests, who never know in advance where the party will take place. They assemble on the roof of the Hotel Ritz and are whisked by helicopter to an unexpected mise-en-scène. The guests were delighted that this year Suzie chose a place closer than last year's venue on top of the Matterhorn, where the guests all ruined their shoes in the snow.

This year Suzie staged a gala dinner-dance for 500 chums in the grand foyer of the Paris Light Opera House. It was preceded by a fashion showing of highlights of the couture season. Belle d'Orsay had a serious which-couturier-topay-homage-to problem. She settled for shoes, gown, wrap, brooch, chapeau, and petticoat, each by a different couturier. Ms. Faux Pas had no choice. She piled the scarves on her little black dress. As she was fighting her way to her seat, Ms. Faux Pas found that her dress was hooked by a chain bag belonging to a reporter from WWWW. In the ensuing disentanglement, Ms. Faux Pas's dress sustained an embarrassing rip.

She considered running to Belle d'Orsay's van for a change of wardrobe, but realized that Belle was wearing everything in the van. So Ms. Faux Pas fled to the ladies room. The attendant offered to close the gap with 20 safety pins (chicly unconcealed), but Ms. Faux Pas recalled Belle saying, "The bag-lady look is fini."

One of the ushers offered Ms. Faux Pas his jacket and belt, but she remembered that WWWW had decreed the tough-chic look was also fini.

Finally the helpful attendant unlocked the door of a nearby opera dressing room, where Ms. Faux Pas spotted the perfect frock. The attendant made some adjustments.

The show had already started. As Ms. Faux Pas returned to her seat all eyes were on her. Had she chosen the wrong "look"? Pas du tout. Suddenly the photographers turned away from the models and started snapping Ms. Faux Pas in her poufed and panniered flowered silk Marie Antoinette gown. So à la mode. Long in back and, thanks to the adjustments, très short in front. Ms. Faux Pas was the only person in the place, except for the models, wearing this season's recherché costume-party look.

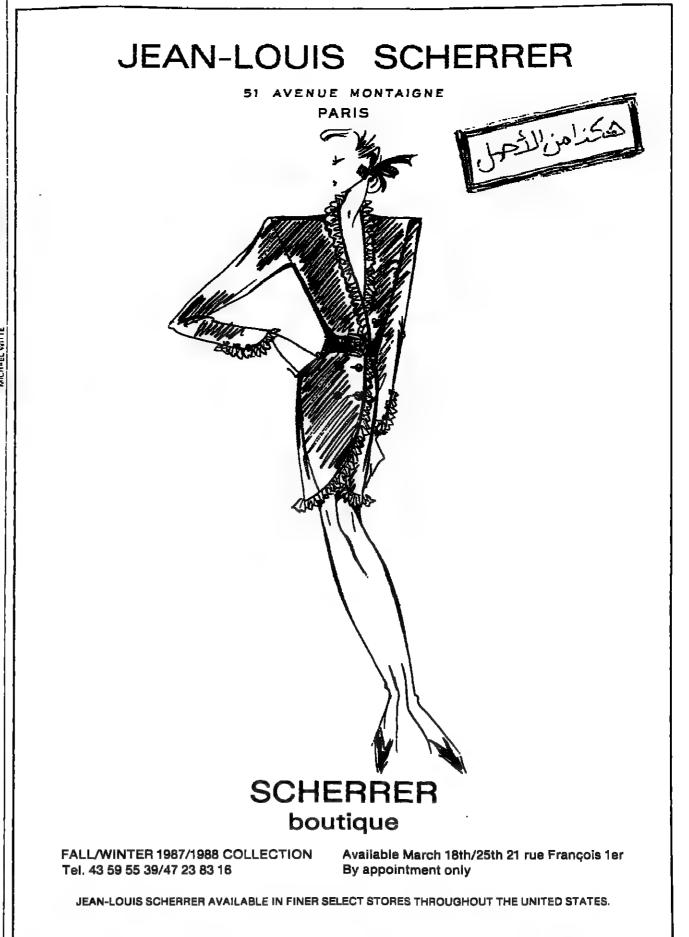

Noticing her for the first time, Jean-Louis Fairweather tossed one of his ubiquitous white bouquets her way. Would she care to make a statement for WWWW?

She was beginning to feel almost as powerful as a bona-fide fashion forecaster. "It's time for fun in fashion, n'est-ce pas?" said Ms. Faux Pas authoritatively.

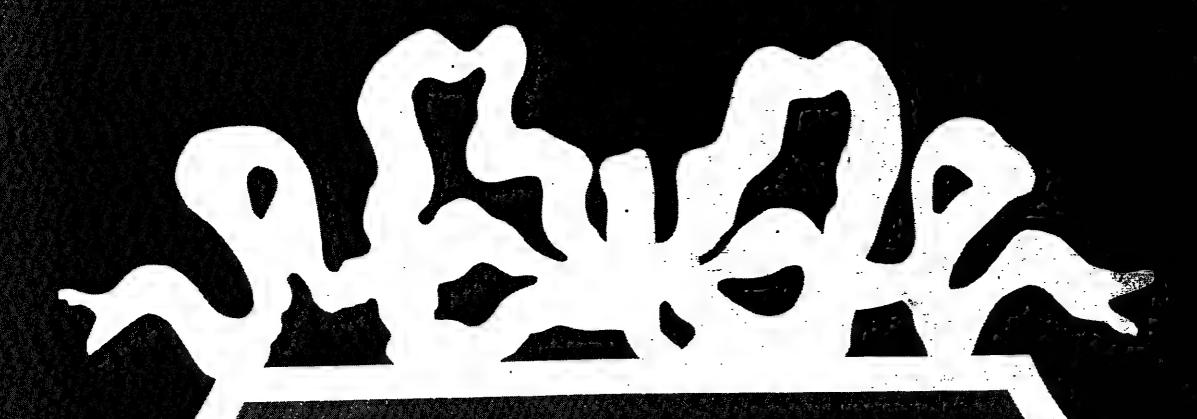

erhaps too authoritatively. Madame d'Orsay leaned L over to Mr. Fairweather conspiratorially and whispered, "I think the pouf is just about fini, n'est-ce pas?"

"D'accord," he responded with a sly smile. The next day, before Suzie Richfriend and her friends had even placed their orders, the death of the pouf and its imminent markdown was front page in WWWW. Vraiment!

Next month Ms. Faux Pas will tell you what "WWWW" said when the powderroom attendant announced she was opening her own couture house.

Whither the Dollar? Baker Keeping His Own Counsel

By LEONARD SILK

New York Thnes Service EW YORK - The United States ran a record deficit in merchandise trade of $170 billion last year. And the broadest measure of the trade deficit, the balance of payments on current account, hit an all-time high of sillon. Many economists, who consider the dollar still overvalued in these circumstances, are asking why the United States agreed at the Group of Six meeting in Paris to help stabilize the dollar at about its present level.

Treasury Secretary James A. Baker 3d, interviewed in Washnagion this week, declined to answer that question. He said it was "a subject I prefer not to talk about." His reason was that if he began to explain why he had agreed to help maintain the dollar where it is, "I would of necessity end up getting into some of the private agreements that support such an agreement" on the dollar.

President Woodrow Wilson once argued for open convenants, openly arrived at, but that is a position financial officials have always rejected, pleading the threat to the stability of markets.

Nevertheless, Mr. Baker has set the financial Sheriock Holmeses of the world on a search for secret agreements that underlie the currency accord of the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain, France and Canada. American acceptance of the accord seems founded on these considerations:

• Widespread discontent, including the United States, with the extreme volatility of exchange rates. Concern that a continuing dollar decline would impede growth in the other industrial countries.

• The need of the United States for dollar stability to obtain assurances from the others that they will adopt measures of macroeconomic stimulus.

Mr. Baker said he still favored a conference to improve the international monetary system and contended that the Paris accord was a "step in the direction" of deeper monetary reform.

N THE world debt issue, he said his plan, introduced 17 months ago at Seoul, was "pretty much on track." He said that "our proposal called for an additional $20 billion in commercial bank lending over three years" along with additional funding from the World Bank and International Monetary Fund.

"On Friday, with the closing of the Mexican package," Mr. Baker said, "you will see $8.5 billion in new lending."

In the past 10 days, he added, Venezuela and Chile reached agreement with their private creditors. And the Philippines, he said, "appears to be making good progress." The only two problems, as far as he is concerned, are Brazil and Ecuador. He regards Ecuador, hammered by the oil price decline and an earthquake, as "a special case."

Mr. Baker was upbeat on the Brazilians: "They are, after all, paying on time all the debt service and principal on their official debts, having just rescheduled with the Paris Chub." He said the Brazilian representatives had explained "in a nonconfrontational way" that they intend to pay their commercial bank debts in full

"We are seeing spreads decline, aren't we?" he said. And interest rates have come down 5 percentage points since 1984, he

The Wall Street Scandal: Another Player Falls

Jefferies Pushed Trading Rules, Himself to Limit

By Richard W. Stevenson

New York Times Service
LOS ANGELES — For years Boyd L. Jefferies has stretched the boundaries of securities trading. As institutional investors came to dominate the market, he and his firm, Jefferies & Co., made it easy for them to trade stocks anywhere, anytime. And as corporate takeovers swept the business world, his willingness to line up stock from arbitrage specllators escalated the action.

On Thursday, Mr. Jefferies ac-knowledged that he had stretched some of Wall Street's rules and practices too far. He said he would plead guilty to two felony counts of violating federal securities laws and resign as chairman and chief executive of the firm he founded here 25 years ago.

One of the counts — for which he has not yet been formally charged — involves a transaction linked to the insider trading scandal surrounding the stock specu-lator Ivan F. Boesky. Mr. Jefferies also agreed to an order barring him from the securities business for at least five years.

Although there had been widepread speculation that Mr. Jefferres would be implicated in the ever-widening scandal, his announcement of his guilty pleas raised questions about the future of Jefferies & Co. and the role it plays in financial markets.

The company moved quickly to try to minimize the damage, naming Frank E. Baxter, the president and chief operating officer, as chief executive. Mr. Baxter who is widely represent in the ter, who is widely respected in the industry, said in an interview that he had spoken with many of the See JEFFERIES, Page 11

To Associates, a Loyal 'Straight Shooter'

By Tom Furlong and Bill Sing Los Angeles Times Service

LOS ANGELES - Boyd L. Jefferies' stunning announcement that he had agreed to plead guilty to securities violations and resign from his broker age marks the downfall of a master stockbroker

The news Thursday from the 56-year-old Los Angeles entrepreneur dumbfounded some associates and admirers who knew him for his legendary devotion to job and clients.

"I always thought he was a straight shooter — aggressive but on this side of the law," said one professional money manager in New York.

In tears and with his voice breaking, Mr. Jefferies broke the news to his staff early Thursday morning. In the statement to employees and stockholders, he wasted no time getting to the point. "It is with deep personal sorrow and regret that I announce my resignation as chairman and chief executive of Jefferies Group, and Jefferies & Co.,"

"For 25 years, Jefferies has been my life," he said. "I am proud of the organization we have built together; I know that the company will continue to grow and maintain its leadership position in our industry and in the market."

Mr. Jefferies made his company the dominant force in so-called third-market trading, in which big investors go to trade big blocks of stock off the floors of the major exchanges, often after the exchanges have closed. The company was contro-versial for helping corporate raiders acquire big blocks of target companies' stock.

"He was the best there was in the block business," one associate said of Mr. Jefferies. "Nobody worked as hard as he did. That was his game." In fact, insiders said that Mr. Jefferies acted more as a chief trader for the company than he did as chief executive. He was a star salesman, accounting for 2 percent to 2.5 percent of its gross commissions in 1986.

Friends and clients described Boyd Jefferies' downfall more as a shame and personal tragedy for the man than a setback for his firm.

They said they had a hard time picturing Jeffer-ies without his business. He is portrayed as a workaholic, often rising at 1:30 A.M. Pacific Time in his Laguna Beach home, getting to work by 3 A.M. and staying at his office as late as 6 P.M. Fabulously rich, Boyd Jefferies owns a $5 mil-See PROFILE, Page 11

THE SCANDAL ON WALL STREET: Another key player takes a fall Plea Shows SEC Moving Beyond Insider Trading

NEW YORK - To many, Wall Street's spreading scandal is analogous to the police who stop a car for speeding, then discover drugs and weapons in the back seat. And no one knows what they will find in

The police in this case, the Securities and Exchange Commission and the U.S. attorney's office in Manhattan, began uncovering insider stock trading by snaring a cosporate deal maker, Dennis B. Levine, and a prominent takeover speculator, Ivan F. Boesky, last

Another major figure, the top merger specialist Martin A. Siegel, came forward last month and pleaded guilty to insider trading. But now, with the trading specialist Boyd L. Jefferies agreeing Thursday to plead guilty to a charge involving Mr. Boesky but not directly tied to insider trading investigators seem to be beginning investigators.

Jefferies plea underscores how the created the potential for abuse. authorities are not only searching for individual abuse, but are examing the overall takeover mecha-nism that brings different financial and arbitragers who personally traded stocks on the basis of impor-

He said that the company still hoped to expand by setting up Offices in Asia to facilitate roundthe-clock trading. "That's where the future is," he said.

But many observers said it would not be easy for the company to overcome the loss of Mr. Jefferies, 56. "The spirit and guiding force of the company was Boyd himself," said a competitor who asked not to be named. "His own intensity was passed on to those who worked for him, and he almost physically drove that organization on a daily basis."

Mr. Jesseries spent his days manning the trading desk and looking over the shoulders of his traders, appearing brusque and spiring loyalty among employees.

"If there's any organization on Wall Street of that size that is dominated by one personality, it is Jefferies," said one competitor.

Perrin Long, who follows the securities industry for Lipper Analviical Services, said that the loss of Mr. Jefferies would almost certainly slow the company's rate of growth, which in the last few years has been in excess of 16

Mr. Long said the company's activities in off-hours trading and in selling large blocks of stocks to takeover specialists might be con-strained, especially if Congress or the Securities and Exchange ulations as a result of disclosures about insider trading.

Nippon Life: A Power at Home and Abroad

By Barnaby J. Feder
New York Times Service
NEW YORK: — Wall Street is no stranger to Nippon Life Insurance Co., the latest Japanese financial institution to show a taste for investing in a big-name American securities firm. Nippon, Japan's largest life insurance company, has been investing heavily in U.S. Treasury bonds, equities, and real estate in recent years.

What has been less known, perhaps, is how dominant a force Nippon is in its home market and how aggressively it has been diversify-ing into other financial services at home, as constraints imposed by the Japanese government have been relaxed. It is not clear yet what relation-

There was "very strong interest in the Canadian dollar," said James Mr. Groarty, vice president of Dispart Corp. of New York. He said hat the U.S. dollar, the pound and the yen remained fairly stable.

The U.S. currency fell in New York to 18280 Deutsche marks from 1.8335 Thursday, to 151.375 4ch from 151.425, to 6.0900 French francs from 6.1025 and to 1.5305 Swiss francs from 1.5345. It also ped against the pound, which dipped against the pound, which against at $1.6045; up from $1.5975.

A U.S. bank trader said that Britain's relatively high interest rates continued to attract foreigners because of the dull conditions elsewhere on currency markets. Foreign investors were encour aged this week by a cut in projected government borrowing in the Brit-ish budget.

The outlook for the pound, however, remains partly dependent on the market's expectations for the dollar, dealers said. Investors and speculators remain

They believe that finance ministers of the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain, France and Canada secretly agreed at their Feb. 22 currency meeting to floors and ceilings for the dollar.

So far, the dollar has held within a range of 1.82 to 1.87 DM since then and has shown little change against other major currencies.

If operators can build up enough confidence to test the limits of the current range, dealers said, interest in the pound will wane and upward pressure will slacken.

In earlier European trading, the dollar was fixed in Frankfurt at 1.8305 DM, down from 1.8336 Thursday, and in Paris at 6.0965 convinced that central bankers are French francs, down from 6.1030.

Fed Data Suggest Banks Have Ample Reserves

eral Reserve data suggest that as purchase agreements. the U.S. banking enters a period of traditional tightness, the system is flush with reserves and overall monetary policy is on hold, economists said.

There is ample liquidity," said Maria Ramirez of Drexel Burnham dates in April. Lambert Inc. "The Fed is not going to shift gears at the present time or for at least another month."

Technical and seasonal considerations aside," said Robert di Clemente of Salomon Brothers Inc., there is nothing" for the credit market "to get excited about." Adjusted bank borrowings from the Fed's discount window averaged only $228 million a day in the first week of the bank statement period ending next Wednesday, compared with $233 million and $451 million in the first weeks of the previous two periods. Another sign of abundant liquid-imated $660 million. Finally, a Fed spokesman said that the 14 money center banks were absent from the Fed's discount window for the third week running, with the latest week's borrowing split between the large regional and the smaller banks. While modest open market interrention was apparently enough to period, economists predicted that bottom of their respective target the Fed would have to be more

"The Fed is faced with a large seasonal adding requirement," said Ward McCarthy of Merrill Lynch & Co., who expects a permanent bill purchase next week and a coupon purchase in early April.

Economists were also heartened by further signs of a deceleration in money supply growth, not only in the largely discredited M-1 gauge but also in the more closely watched M-2 and M-3 aggregates. M-1, the narrowest measure of the money supply, consists of money in circulation, in traveler's checks and in checking accounts. ### EC. Comecon End Talks Still Blocked on Berlin

GENEVA - The European Community and the Soviet bloc's Council for Mutual Economic Assistance, or Comecon, ended their first round of negotiations Friday on establishing formal relations. But the two sides remained sharply divided over the question of including West Berlin in the Western group, diplomats said.

Although officials of the 12-member EC said they had made some progress in three days of talks here, they added that the 10-nation Comecon had refused to accede to the EC position on West Berlin, which is physically isolated inside East German territory.

EC sources said they expected a new Comecon offer on West Berlin when the talks resume at an unspecified date later this year. Under the 1957 Treaty of Rome that formed the EC, West Berlin is termed an integral part of the Western economic group. An official communique by the community said the talks took place in a "good and businesslike atmosphere," and added that "each side put forward drafting suggestions for several provisions of the text." "Some progress was made towards clarifying positions and bring-ing them closer together," the statement said. "The delegations were of the opinion that another meeting would be necessary for the completion of this work." This round of negotiations was the second time the two sides had met in six months. A meeting of experts here last September broke a five-and-a-half-year hiatus that began in 1981, when the talks broke off amid deteriorating East-West relations. Total EC trade with Comecon in 1986 amounted to about $47 billion, according to figures from the UN Commission for Europe.

the United States, contributed to a deeper and longer worldwide depression in the 1930s by adopting isolationist economic policies," he told a congressional committee last week. THEY look so benign, these women of the last A century, with their old-fashioned clothes and hair. The old photographs hardly suggest the price they paid for their work, much less the passion and rigor of their strife-torn years. We moderns may be fooled into thinking of Jenny Marx and Rosa Luxemburg as merely quaint - antique women of little consequence as the century nears its end.

Now come two slim biographies that help counteract such foolishness. As H.F. Peters and Elzbieta Ettinger amply demonstrate, Rosa Luxemburg and Jenny Marx are important. What they fought for, after all, was ultimately won. The East is Red, and the world is changed.

Yet it might not have been, had not the teen-aged Jenny von Westphalen failen madly under the spell of Karl Marx, who was four years younger, in the provincial German town of Trier. She was a baroness, a Protestant princess; he was Jewish. She went on to marry the intellectual father of communism in 1843 at age 29, bore his four children and devoted the rest of her life and fortune to him and his vision of a better world. She turned her head from his promiscuity, forgiving him for the illegitimate son he fathered with the family housekeeper, Helene (Lenchen) Demuzh Demuth survived both, and it appears that she and Marx destroyed most of Jenny's records, her diary and letters. In consequence, Peters's book is far too thin a broth, short on detail and ideas.

Still, there is little doubt that Jenny's endless sacrifice for the "revolution" was essential. She answered Marx's mail, proofed his books, bailed him out of jail, helped him round out ideas and became a quiet but necessary part in the process of formulating the ideological underpinnings of com-munism. And as Peters points out in "Red Jenny," the sole English biography of Jenny Marx, the price lutionary work. Rosa Luxemburg electrified the masses. She also turned out books, articles, letters, diaries and other writing on her political struggles and private life that still survive. Ettinger mines this lode to craft a delt portrait of Luxemburg, focusing on the woman behind the revolution, the dreamer who desired to have a child, a loving man and family at the same time she led the European socialist movement. The daughter of a Jewish merchant, Luxemburg was born March 5, 1870, in Zamosć, Poland. She was a woman of profound intellectual gifts who earned a Ph.D., mastered German, French, Russian and English, and became a powerful leader in German labor and socialist circles at the beginning of the century.

Like Jenny Marx, Luxemburg disliked the spoiled land and the extremes of wealth and poverty 19th-century capitalism created. She came to believe Marx's notion that capitalism would never willingly right these wrongs, and that only a revolution could bring humanity back into balance. She devoted her

The irony is that she and Jenny were hardly members of the downtrodden masses, yearning to be free of the evils of capitalism. They enjoyed all its benefits. Rosa's tragedy was that she died without seeing any of her dreams come true. She was murdered by a young officer during a mad scramble for power after the Kaiser fled Berlin in 1919.

Today there are streets in Moscow named after Rosa Luxemburg and Jenny Marx. But Moscow gnores both, and actually bans Luxemburg's dusty the idea that communism was to be imposed on the many by a few ideologues at the top. She argued with her usual passion that social change was possible only when the people democratically choose to make such changes.

More than running, the great leaping race horses of Britain and Ireland went booming around the champion steeplechase course set in the gentle Vale of Gloucester, vying in a competition that is one of the few annually reliable high points of British-Irish relations.

It is the National Hunt Racing contest, three days of competition rooted in the resilient green turf and broad noble backs of the bloodline the two nations proudly share in the world's finest burdlers and steeplechase racers.

"You have to love them," said Rick Cook, an advertising executive who comes each year from London, 90 miles (145 kilometers) to the east, to admire the many visiting Irish horseplayers as much as the champion Irish

"God, they're fearless punters," he said of the Irish bettors who make this the last grand Saturnalian rite of the British winter. "They'll throw everything they own at the bookmakers and they'll do it for the sheer

Joe Stapleton, an Anglophile when it comes to horses, said he makes his annual fanatic outing from Tipperary across the Irish Sea because there is no place like Cheltenham for what the Irish term "the crack" - the sporting fun and thunder of a race among the best at gliding and pounding along the trickiest turi inclines.

The crack is good here, it's a great atmosphere that we love, and there's no better horse racing possible," he said after losing $300 on the nose of an Irish jumper in the first race. A companion reminded him that there was an alternative to teethgnashing: "We'll drink our way

The betting on the Irish side at least, is quite nationalistic.

When an Irish horse races off Then shafts of sanlight hit the with a big prize, crowds of the Irish throw their hats in the air and burst onto the track from the low-priced betting quarter to lead the creature to the prize ring. English sports, who have heen busy buying up strong Irish horses over the centuries, can only salute them.

The horses are beautiful brutes of stamina that must bound over as many as 30 roughhedged five-foot-high (1.5-me-

Some of the punters who come from Dublin each year by the tens of thousands were sipping hot Irish whiskey in the winter rawness Thursday morning. three hours before the first race. With their keen eye for horseflesh, they seemed as regal in their way as the aristocrats of blood and business out from London who sipped champagne and sherry in heated boxes and shopped seriously, it seemed, among a display of new Rolls-Royces between races. The track is set in a fold of dappled hills. Only Cheltenham bunt racing can attract the disparate nobil-ities of the Queen Mother, smiling in the prize ring, and Charmian Hill, a wee Irish woman so joyously addicted to steeplechase racing that she had to be banned as a jockey at the age of 64 when she was almost killed in hurdle accident.

Hill was the owner of the Irish mare Dawn Run, the only horse ever to win the two big Cheltenham prizes, the Champion Hurdle and the Gold Cup steeplechase, a most unusual combination of separate feats of finesse and strength in one horse.

That was one of the great days of modern history on English ground for the true Irish. They enjoy hunt racing as an activity in which owners of modest means can survive in the sport by spotting promising local horses and slowly training them for five years before they jump for

Because geldings are pregame of putting a champion out to stud early in its career.

The people who come here, Irish and English, know that this is a branch of racing that will never be elitist and manipulated by big-money owners," said Tom Smyth, who has been coming from Cork, Ireland, since 1950. Amid the cheers of another Cheltenham meet, there was the British and Irish: a common mourning. It was for Dawn Run. who was killed in a race in France last year, a few months after her last triumph here.

"I had a thousand riding on the frontramer and Dawn Run overtook him at the last jump," said Cook, standing by the jump that leads onto a homestretch that runs cruelly uphill. "She ran straight up the damn hill like no other champion, and everyone stood and applauded that

KAANAPALI, Hawaii - Na- arbitration fight against the tional Football League owners have given instant replay a second life — barely.

A proposal to extend to next season the use of instant replay in officiating garnered just the 21 votes it needed for passage Thursday, Seven teams — Cincinnati, the New York Giants, the New York Jets, Pittsburgh, New England, St. Louis and Kansas City — opposed using replay in the 1987 season.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle backed the proposal and lobbied with the owners. "I didn't twist any arms," the commissioner said. "I just told two or three owners before the meeting that I was for it... I told them I thought we could do a better job for them this year." The commissioner decided at the last moment to change the replay an NHL-record 91 penalty minutes proposal to a one-year, rather than two-year, extension. The debate was characterized by Rozelle as "emotional" at times, Jack Steadman, the Kansas City Chiefs president, was one of those who opposed the measure.

"Our concern was primarily pace of the game," Steadman said. "We feel long delays of play like we saw last year kills momentum." ■ London Game Proposal

The Los Angeles Rams and Denver Broncos will meet Aug. 9 at London's Wembley Stadium if the NFL and its players union can settle a dispute over a union demand for $80,000 to allow the preseason game to take place. The Associated Press reported from Kaanapali.

Rozelle announced the match-up Friday, but said it was contingent on settlement of the dispute with the Players Association, which must give permission to play what would be a fifth exhibition contest for both teams. The commissioner said the union wanted the money to

NEW YORK - After a year's absence from the Final Four, the Big East Conference is back in

Three conference teams -Georgetown, Syracuse and Providence - scored impressive victones in Thursday night's regional semifinals of the National Collegiate Athletic Association's baskethall tournament

Twelve teams remain from the 64 that began the tournament earlier this month, but the Big East already is assured of having at least one team in the Final Four, and could have two. Georgetown won the tourna-the Hoyas for the 1985 title, the year St. John's gave the Big East three members of the Final Four. In the Southeast regional at Louisville, Kentucky, Providence used ment in 1984 and Villanova beat three-point shooting to roll to an upset of ninth-ranked Alabama, and fourth-ranked Georgetown stopped No. 20 Kansas for the Hoyas' 14th straight victory. In the East regional at East Rutherford, New Jersey, center

Rony Seikaly scored a career-high 33 points to lead No. 10 Syracuse over Florida. Then, in Thursday's only game that didn't involve a team from the Big East, North Carolina's freshman sensation, J.R. Reid, scored 31 points and personally held off No. 18 Notre Dame down the stretch as the secondranked Tar Heels avenged a reguar-season loss

Georgetown and Providence meet Saturday for the fourth time this season - Georgetown has won twice - with the winner advancing to the Final Four. If Syracuse beats North Carolina on Saturday, the Orangemen will play the Georgetown-Providence winner in the national semifinals. Georgetown 70, Kansas 57: Reggie Williams scored 34 points to lead the Hoyas.

Georgetown was trailing, 41-39, with 13:17 left in the game when cover its legal costs in its successful Charles Smith scored seven straight points. He started with a threepoint shot, added a basket off a fast break and then hit two free throws cos to meet the Giants in London, to stretch the Hoyas' lead to 46-41.

Syracuse 87, Florida 81: Syracuse crased a 69-64 deficat and took the lead for good 77-75 on freshman Derrick Coleman's dunk with 1:49 left. However, both coaches agreed that Coleman's block on Andrew Moten's shot with 5:10 to go and Florida leading by five was the turning point, since the Orangemen promptly cut the deficit to 69-67 on Howard Triche's three-point

"It was the key to the game," said the Syracuse coach, Jim Boeheim. If Moten had scored, he said, we would have been down seven and it would be very tough to come back from there."

Florida's coach, Norm Sloan, said, "I thought we had them on the ropes, but they came back and did what they had to do to win. The big play was on Moten's drive and they got a block with no foul."

. The expected battle of big mer never materialized. The 6-foot-10 (2.10-meter) Seikaly scored 23 points in the first half while Florida's 7-2 (2.19-meter) freshman Dwayne Schintzius had only six points before fouling out with 3:37 left. Vernon Maxwell led the Gators with 25 points.

North Carolina 74, Notre Dame 68: Reid was the North Carolina offense in the final 7:45. The 6foot-9 forward scored 16 of the Tar Heels' final 17 points with a variety of turnaround jumpers and rimshaking dunks.

English Soccer Professional Plays With Heart Pacemaker

LONDON — Chris Hemming has made soccer history by becoming the first professional player to be fitted with a heart pacemaker.

Hemming, a defender who will be 21 next month, had the pacemaker fitted last summer after persistent breathing problems. But his club Stoke, standing seventh in the English League second division, has just released the news.

The manager, Mick Mills, said Friday: "We wanted to see how he coped when he came back before we released the story. We did not want to put further pressure on the lad at the time.

"He was not quite right early on and twice had to go back to have the pacemaker reset. Now it seems he has battled through his own personal trauma," said Mills, a former England captain. Hernming, who joined Stoke from school, complained two years ago of breathing difficulties. He forced his way into the first team last season but was still struggling to finish games.

On Tuesday night, he came through a game without difficulty as Stoke beat second division rivals Sunderland, 3-0.

WAITING — Pirmin Zurbriggen, who has won the World Cup overall, downhill and super-giant slalom ski titles this season, waits on the Bjelasnica mountain course at Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, after missing a gate in Thursday's giant slalom race. The race was later called off and postponed again Friday due to high winds. He will try to wrap up the giant slalom title on Sunday.

4 Speed Skating Records Are Broken

HEERENVEEN, Netherlands (AP) - Two American and two Dutch skaters set world records at a speed skating event on Thursday.

Nick Thometz of the United States skated 500 meters in 36.55 seconds improving the men's record by 1.02. The old mark was held by Pavel Pegov of the Soviet Union. Bonnie Blair of the United States clocked 39.43 seconds at 500 meters to break the women's record of 39.52 seconds held by Karin Kania of East Germany.

In the 3,000 meters, Leo Visser of the Netherlands set a men's record of 3:59.27. Last year, Viktor Shasherin of the Soviet Union skated that distance in 4:03.22. The 3,000 meter women's world record was also taken from Kania, by Dutch skater Yvonne van Gennip, in 4:16.85 seconds. Kania's previous record was 4:18.02.

U.S. Gymnasts Rebuff South Africa

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - In response to an invitation to send athletes to South Africa, the U.S. gymnastics team has voted unanimously to suspend competition with that country, the U.S. Gymnastics Federation

The federation's Athletes Council cited the South African government's policy of apartheid and the growing political unrest there. The council, which consists of current and former members of the U.S. gymnastics team, supported Thursday the position taken last December by the federation's board of directors.

New Brain Surgery Set for Howser

KANSAS CITY, Missouri (UPI) - Dick Howser, the former Kansas City Royals manager, was to undergo Friday a third operation for treatment of a malignant brain tumor, a club spokesman said. Howser was to undergo immunostimulation, a form of experimental brain surgery in which cancer-killing cells are injected into the area of a malignant brain tumor, at a bospital in Pasadena, California. Howser underwent a left frontal craniotomy last July 22 in Kansas City and initial immunostimulation surgery at the California hospital on Dec. The club spokesman said Howser had a brain scan this month and learned that there was some evidence there was growth in the tumor.

Since its founding by Jesuit priests about 40 years ago, the Saint-Georges Russian Studies Center in Meudon has graduated more than 10,000 men and women, including students, professors, diplomats, military officers, journalists, businessmen, actors and actresses, primarily from Western Europe and the United States. The training, most agree, is diffi-cult to obtain elsewhere outside the Soviet Union.

During the early 1950s, U.S. intelligence officers asked through intermediaries if they could help in "modernizing" the center, but the priests declined the offer. "They were trying to take us over," a priest said.

The language courses, in which spouses are encouraged to join, range from several weeks to four months, and generally require residing in sparsely furnished rooms and taking meals there. Students and outsiders also may enroll in icon-painting courses offered three times a week, and conduct research at two libraries that contain archives, specialized magazines and a copy of one of the first Russian Bibles.

But the center also wields clout by virtue of its alumni, many of whom now hold key — and diplomatically sensitive - jobs throughout the world. On weekends, some drop by the center with their spouses to brush up on their Russian and to discuss the latest developments in the Soviet Union with faculty members often over a Russian meal.

Several hundred alumni are expected to return for the annual June reunion, which will be highlighted by performances of Russian theater and music, and icon whenever we return to Paris," said the wife of a senior French diplomat currently working in the Middle East. Both graduated more than 20 years ago, and plan to return for the June festivities.

There are, of course, many other excellent Russian studies centers, particularly in the United States, but also in France, Japan, Britain and West Germany," said Alain Besançon, a leading French expert on the Soviet Union who occasionally lectures at the center. "But Meudon is a very special and excellent place for studying Russian. It is a lively place. And above all, it is neutral" politically. This place is definitely Russian in spirit, not Soviet, and it is not the typical classroom situation one tends to find at U.S. language centers," said Jesse Zeldine, an American professor of Russian literature, who is researching a book at Meudon while on a sabbatical from Hollins College in Roanoke, Virginia.

The setting blends scenery from a Chekhov play and a small. American college campus. Nestled behind stone walls, among birch and pine trees, are a 19thcentury mansion and a small, onion-domed Russian Orthodox church. The silence is occasionally broken by the chatter of Rus-

"You walk through the gate by the wall over there, and you're right back in Old Russia," said Zeldine, who was translating a Russian text into English in the small library. Why was he here? The two libraries, the highly qualified priests, the visiting Russian lecturers, the reference materials such as Prayda every day. But above all, total immersion in Russian atmosphere - those are some reasons.

Beatrix Walcot, 20, who is in her third year of studying Russian at Exeter University in England, is training to become a Russianlanguage specialist for the Royal Air Force, which is paying for her studies. "It's obvious I cannot go to the Soviet Union, so I have come to Meudon," she said in English over lunch in the mansion's main dining room, where normally only Russian is spoken.

"Here the language and civilization comes alive, because we are all living and working together on a daily basis," said Walcot, one of 40 students, mainly from Britain and other West European coun-tries, currently enrolled in the four-month course. "For example, we learn expressions, includ-ing literary slang, that I couldn't capital. But four years later, the

He earned his doctorate at the Sorbonne in Paris and has been helping direct the center since 1938. "We have come a long way," cow, as a condition for establishing diplomatic relations with Turkey, insisted that Russian emigre groups leave the Bosporus area. After trying to enter France, the priests and a handful of new Soviet government in Mos-

youngsters settled in Namur, Belgium. There they purchased a small chateau, which became the new center, comprising living and study facilities. Gradually, it attracted children of Russian emigres from the Baltic states, the Balkans, and, of course, from France, which had become the largest Russian community outside the Soviet Union. The German invasion of Belgium forced a third move in 1942.

"I was working in the Belgian Résistance at that time, acting as an interpreter for Russian war prisoners who had escaped from German-occupied coal mines there," Father Alexis said. "But I turned all my attention to the center's move, which occurred clandestinely, via boats and barges until we finally arrived in Paris in 1942 — with our library, the fur-niture, the children, everything."

Four years later, with the proceeds from the sale of the Namur property, Father Alexis and several other Jesuit priests arranged for the purchase of the present, 2hectare (4.9-scre) site in Mendon. But with the dwindling of emigre children, starting in 1949, the center was converted into a study center for Russian language and civilization.

A key step was converting the Orangerie into an Orthodox church, which included painting Russian icons on its walls by Egon Zendler, known as Father Igor, who has written extensively on iconography. He is the center's administrative head. Every Sunday, the Jesuits perform an Orthodox rite at the church adopted by the Catholic Church about 70 years ago.

The service is exactly the same as the Russian, but allegiance is to the pope in Rome," Father Alexis said. "We certainly do not require those enrolled in courses to at-

Indeed, said Zeldine, who described himself as an agnostic, "T notice very few students go into the church. There is absolutely no religious pressure around here that I am aware of."
